Recommendation Letter

Martin Gerdin Wörnberg is a young medical doctor, resident in Anaesthesia and Intensive Care, and Associate Professor of Clinical Epidemiology. He has quickly become a committed and highly valued researcher at the department. He combines clinical excellence with methodological rigor and is an inspiration to other colleagues. He is course leader and a much-appreciated teacher in second and third level education at Karolinska Institutet. Furthermore, he has extensive collaboration with researchers both in Sweden and globally. He has been a leading person in establishing close partnership with Indian researchers and has founded a consortium on improved trauma care. His research highlights the need for global collaboration to address the major public health challenges in trauma care and is now focused on local adaption and implementation of trauma quality improvement programmes in general and trauma life support training in particular.
